GLASGOW

The Glasgow University is a handsome building in the early Pointed style, standing in a commanding position on Gilmorehill, overlooking the West End Park. It was begun in 1867 from designs by the late Sir Gilbert Scott, the foundation stone being laid by the King, then Prince of Wales, in October, 1868. It is rectangular in form, with two quadrangles, the main front on the south side having a Central Tower and Spire 150 feet high.

Hello George,

Well, here I am again, but there's still no place like home. See you soon if you're not in the army. Regards to all.

Mike
